

BISHOP SPALDING TO ADDRESS SUNDAY NIGHT CLUB

The Rt. Rev. F. S. Spalding, D.D., Bishop of Utah, will address the Sunday Night Club tomorrow evening on the subject of "The Educational Value of the Novel and the Drama." The address will be in the nature of a review of Winston Churchill's "The Inside of the Cup." This book presents some problems that confront the religious and social workers of today, and there are few men better qualified to deal with such a subject than Bishop Spalding.

The meeting will be held in the Guild Hall of the Church of the Good Shepherd at 7:30 p.m., and is open to the general public. An opportunity for discussing the subject will be given at the close of the address. Special music has been arranged for.

Next Sunday the subject of the address will be the proposed plan of converting the Central sub-high school into a social center. This is one of the features of the new half-day school plan, and the subject will be presented by an able speaker.

Globe Tonight and Sunday night, a double feature program presenting Francis X. Bushman in "The Hour and the Man." Essanay feature in two reels, "The Masked Dancer." Vitaphone's 2 part Mexican drama, one of their best, and Mabel Trunnelle in "The Girl in the Middy."

STUDENTS VISIT THE PACKING PLANT

The students of the Lewis junior high school visited the Ogden packing plant during the week and the pupils were required to write their impressions, from which the following, by Viola Critchlow, is selected as an example of school composition:

A Girl's Observations.

The Ogden Packing plant is located on West Twenty-fourth street, just west of the viaduct. The Union depot, stock yards and oil plant are situated near the plant.

The offices are large and in them such work as stenography and book-keeping is carried. The fertilizing room, packing room and killing room are the main parts of the building.

Great herds of cattle come daily to the plant to be bought. They are inspected thoroughly, before being accepted, by the inspectors.

The killing is done in the most humane way possible. This is done by first hitting the cattle in the head with an ax and stunning them, and then by cutting the throats. The hides and entrails are removed directly after the killing. A sharp knife is the means of doing this. The hides are shipped to tanneries, where they are tanned and made into leather. The blood and entrails are dried and used for soil fertilizers. Bones are sometimes ground and used for chicken feed, or sent to factories and made into buttons. After being killed the cattle are again inspected by government inspectors. The head, hearts, lungs, and stomachs are the parts most thoroughly inspected, as they sometimes are found to be diseased, when the other parts of the carcass seem to be free from germs. About fifteen cattle can be killed and dressed in one hour, this being on an average of one in four minutes. Before the meat is removed, the inspector stamps each section.

The drying room is well ventilated having windows both near the floor and ceiling. The meat is suspended from hooks that are fastened in the ceiling. The air that comes in from the lower windows carries the moisture from the meat out through the windows in the ceiling. Meat is usually kept in this room a few hours, but sometimes for a day or two, in order to allow it to become thoroughly set.

The coolers have ice-boxed walls that are packed only in the summer, because the air is cold enough to chill the meat in winter. The meat is kept in this about three days.

The cutting is used mainly in the preparation of hogs. In this room are sanitary tables that can be taken apart and cleaned thoroughly. The cutter is a large saw called Tucker's Band saw, which cuts the pork into different sections. Under the cutter is a rotating table, and from this the parts fall onto the board tables to be cut by hand. On one end of this table is a roller which is used for the rolling of bacon to flatten it. The cut meat is dropped through a chute to the pickling cellar.

In the pickling cellar the hams and bacon are cured. This cellar contains a number of large vats, the capacity of each being three hundred and fifty gallons. A solution of salt, sugar, saltpeter and other ingredients is poured over the meat. The hams and such cuts are kept in the curing vats from sixty to ninety days. The plant has four smokers. The smokers resemble furnaces somewhat, being large and having great iron doors. The meat is smoked from thirty-six to thirty-eight hours. Hams and bacon are the only meat smoked.

In one part of the building is the packing room. This room adjoins the smoking room. Hams and bacon are wrapped and also some other meats. Girls and women are employed to do this work.

The sausage room is forty by fifteen feet in size. This room contains tables, two grinders, a mixer, a feeder and other machinery. Several men are employed to prepare the meat for the grinders. The grinders are small vats, each containing a number of revolving knives, and in these vats the meat is ground up fine. The mixer mixes together the ground meats, the ground spices and other ingredients; after the sausage is mixed it is transferred from the mixer to a large tank called the feeder. A pressure of forty pounds forces the sausage from the tank of the feeder, into the skins and onto the tables. Girls and women are employed to make the sausage into links. This is done by pressing and tying the long strings of sausage into links about four inches long.

Lard is rendered from fat in large vessels. Steam heat is used in this department. A substance called Fuller's earth is put in with the lard to bleach and refine it. After being bleached, the lard is poured into pails of different sizes and set aside to cool. A compound called Cholesterol is made from such articles as fat and cotton seed oil. This is used as a substitute for lard.

The Ogden Packing plant was established in nineteen hundred and six. There are over 100 persons employed by the company at the present time. The rapid growth of the plant is shown in the fact that at the date of establishment, there were only thirty-five persons employed. Inspectors are paid by the government and not by the owners of the plant.

ELKO, NEVADA, NOW IS SECOND CITY IN THAT STATE

Supervisor S. B. Arthur of the Humboldt forest, who is in Ogden, is of the opinion that a present census of Nevada would show Elko second only to Reno in population in the state. Besides the steady development of the trade of the farming and livestock interests over the vast area for which Elko is the shipping and receiving point, the establishment of the division of the Western Pacific railway has materially contributed to the growth of the city. Among recent new buildings are a number of attractive bungalows on the bench, a new hotel, court house, three-story building for stores and offices, three new church buildings, and new buildings for the State Industrial school, which is located eight miles from town.

Machinery and horses have been purchased, and, as soon as weather conditions will permit, work will be begun by the forest service in co-operation with settlers on the repair of fifty miles of road in the Humboldt national forest.

The projects approved for the coming spring are the repairing of the road from the Penrod bridge, north across Sunflower Flat, through the country at the head of Telephone Creek, known locally as the "Machogans" and down McDonald creek to Hicks creek, thence north to the Idaho line. This opens up a new route for settlers in northern Elko county, through to Mountain Home and Boise; also gives an outlet for ranchers and settlers living in this vicinity of McDonald Creek to Elko, the county seat. The county has done several hundred dollars' worth of work on this road the past season.

Another project is the repair of the road from Mountain City to Aura. This is the regular stage and mail road from Elko and Tuscarora to Mountain City, and is also extensively used for freighting by wagon.

A third project is the repair of the Jack Creek road which is a short cut through the Independence division of the Humboldt from the Tuscarora country to the Gold Creek and upper North Fork country. By this road the distance from Gold Creek to Tuscarora will be reduced thirty or forty miles.

It is also planned to build a road from Gold Creek to Jarbridge, up Martin canyon across the Bruneau river, and following the divide between Coon Creek and the Jarbridge river to join the Jarbridge, Charleston, and Deeth road near the head of Bear creek, thence to Jarbridge.

These improvements will open up direct route between Elko and northern Elko county and Idaho, Twin Falls, Rogerson and Buhl. The Gold Creek-Jarbridge road is of special interest, since it passes through one of the most scenic parts of Nevada. These roads will be constructed so that they can be traveled by automobile and will add much to the pleasure as well as to the convenience of the public.

KETONEN TO MEET CHESTER IN IDAHO

Waino Ketonen and Walter Chester, two wrestlers well known locally, have been matched for a bout to take place in Pocatello next Wednesday night. Ketonen, since his victory over Chris Jordan at Salt Lake a couple of months ago, has been in Ogden and has many friends here. Chester also has a number of local admirers.

While there seems to be no real doubt as to Ketonen's ability to win the match, Chester's friends say that he has improved enough of late to put up a good bout with the more experienced man. Ketonen expects to leave Ogden tonight or tomorrow for Pocatello.

Puritan Undermuslins

That fashions in outer garments govern the styles in lingerie is forcefully illustrated by our new styles of Puritan Undermuslins.

Sheer, snug-fitting undergarments of soft materials that produce no suggestion of bulkiness in the outer apparel predominate this season in Puritan Undermuslins.

The flat trimming on princess slips, underskirts and combinations, introduced by Puritan Undermuslins last season, is again a style feature. The slashed skirt effects in the new combinations, princess slips and underskirts show how closely Puritan Undermuslins follow the latest styles.
